Dear Mr. Black:

Your articles have interested me greatly; the story of John Wilkes Booth, with all its tragedy and pain, makes a strong appeal to the imagination. It is, therefore, with genuine regret that I must tell you of our decision not to undertake its publication. But lack of confidence on the part of our sales force, doubt of our ability to handle it satisfactorily, to give it sufficient space on our crowded program, forces us to decline it. I am heartily sorry, and wish for the book the success it deserves in more fortunate hands.

With many thanks for your courtesy and with kindest regards,

Sincerely yours,

D L Chambers
