The Soul of Ann Rutledge

"Five years after publication this exquisite Lincoln love story has become a classic." Of it Sir Gilbert Parker says ". . . It overcomes one. I scarcely know why. . . . It stifles criticism."

The Soul of Abe Lincoln

"The fine and tender romance of a Southern 'belle' and a Union officer in which is reflected the serene spirit and heroic faith of that older Lincoln where strength was the strength of the Nation." The New York Times calls it "A moving and appealing story especially worth reading for its vivid and thrilling and historically accurate portrayal of war times and events."

Booth and the Spirit of Lincoln

"The whole setting is superb. I dreamed John Wilkes Booth for a week after I read the book. . . ." A stirring romance of the escape of the handsome and impassioned Booth ". . . Mrs. Babcock has struck a deeply human appeal. No admirer of Lincoln can resist it. No other Lincoln romance will bring them so close to their hero."

Little Abe Lincoln

Announced for 1926 Publication

A story for children of all ages, bringing to light and life the obscure childhood of Abraham Lincoln and his sister Sarah. A wildwood story of childish joy and sorrow, of adventure and achievement.

Lincoln of Springfield

A historical romance in the making, which the author believes the word "powerful" describes.

The Lincoln Series issued by the J. B. Lippincott Company

The Coming of the King

A love story of Mary and the Christ. "The best story ever written—or the worst." "As literature it ranks with Ben Hur." Dedicated "To Those Who Understand."

A Bobbs-Merrill publication.

My dear Mr Block:-

While we can not agree on the quality of evidence, we can join hands in honest admiration of the great character of Lincoln.

This is a word of appreciation of your Feb 6 issue of the Independent. Your personal and editorial work is fine.

With good wishes

Mrs Bernie Babcock
