Dear Mr Caldwell:

The writer was very pleased indeed to receive your letter of May 2nd and to know that you enjoyed the articles regarding John Wilkes Booth.

I am making a collection of all the stories that people have to tell who met and knew Booth after the assassination. I wonder if you could get any more details about him as Professor Ravenwood and as a bartender in Birmingham, Alabama. As the years go by the myth grows bigger; the Booths multiply and become more versatile.

We have had considerable interest expressed in the series and I am preparing an additional five articles dealing with other phases of the assassination and abduction plots.

Very truly yours
