Dear Mr Wilson:

With reference to your letter of June 26th, I appreciated very much receiving a copy of "John Wilkes Booth" and have intended writing you long ere this. If anyone should ask forgiveness, I should, for not sooner telling you how much I enjoyed the book.

I have read it more or less on the run, a little at a time. You see, I learned to fly last year and since early spring I have been up in the air both figuratively and literally. There is no objection at this end to the references made to our research work.

I had the manuscript for a book about three-quarters completed several years ago. One part of Heaven, however, is paved with my good intentions and probably always will be.

Just how far is it to "The Hill" from New York City? I get down there occasionally and would like to see you. Dearborn joins Detroit, so don't pass us up if you get any place near.

Sincerely yours
