Dear Mr Byington:

Your letter of May 9th to the Dearborn Publishing Company has been referred to the writer, who was glad indeed to know that you were interested in the Booth articles.

I wonder, since you attended the trial of the conspirators on several days, whether you have in your files or your library documents or books dealing with the assassination, which you would be kind enough to loan to me for a short period. Have you any criticisms to make of statements in our articles? I have been as careful as I possibly could in selecting and arranging the material but feel that you would be a much better judge of the facts surrounding that turbulent period in American history than myself.

The Mailing Department advise me that they are checking the non-receipt of your paper and hope to get it to you on time. They are addressing you at 3 West 102nd Street. Should they change this?

Very truly yours

THE DEARBORN PUBLISHING CO
