Dear Mr. Eisenschiml:

Your letter of August 11th has been referred to me here. Since June 1st I have been with E. R. Squibb & Sons, 745 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Unfortunately all my John Wilkes Booth material is now in storage and I can only depend upon my memory for names. However, there is one thing certain. At no time did I represent myself in this investigation as other than a writer who was checking up on the various stories that had already been told.

It wouldn't take much strain of imagination for those old chaps around Granberry and Glen Rose Mills to figure that my representations were too simple and that I must be a Government agent. During the year I spent on this investigation I was asked by several if I had any connection with the War Department. Those who read Bates' book figured that the Government might be getting busy at last. I believe you have the articles I wrote covering the investigation. In the section dealing with Granberry and Glen Rose, you will find the names of the people I saw there. The most important one, as I remember, was Lon Gordon. Also there was a man by the name of Wright and several others, all of whom knew more about it than Crockett.

I am tremendously interested in your investigation and will be glad to know more about your findings.

Very truly yours,
